

Local and Personal.

Robbery and Arrest.—Yesterday morning, at about nine o'clock, young Sam, calling himself George King, entered the room at the National Hotel, occupied by Dr. William T. G. Morton and his wife, and stole therefrom a set of jewelry, consisting of a bracelet, breastpin, and earrings, consisting of one hundred dollars, together with a fob-chain and two other bracelets. He had broken open a trunk with a new mortising chisel. The doctor, on returning to his room, met the thief coming out of it, and engaged in conversation with him as to what was his business there, and received an answer which at first seemed to satisfy him. A few moments thereafter, however, the doctor discovered the loss which he had sustained. But the robber had fled. Information of what had occurred having reached officers Cox and Allen, they started in pursuit; and their suspicion that he had gone to the Waldenburgh switch, there to take the cars for Baltimore, was, unfortunately for the fugitive, fully realized; for they found him at the object of their search, quietly waiting for the railroad train. On approaching him and saying that he was the very man they were looking for, he handed them a hunting-watch, probably stolen from a party other than Dr. Morton. The watch is numbered 34,524, with the inscription Des Granges, Geneva; detached lever, full jeweled. King delivered up nearly all of the articles which he had stolen; and having been brought back to the city he underwent an examination before Justice Goddard, who, the proof against him being positive, committed him to jail to await trial during the ensuing term of the criminal court. Four skeleton keys were found on the person of the prisoner.

Washington Corporation.—In the House of Representatives, yesterday, Mr. Hamilton reported a bill granting additional powers to the corporation, and it was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. It provides, among other things, that all officers of the corporation shall be elective. The people, it will be recollected, expressed themselves in favor of this measure several years ago. The bill likewise makes provision for the establishment of police and municipal courts, and of a house or houses of refuge, to be supported and governed by means of special taxation. It also gives additional powers in relation to footways, streets, grading, lighting the city, and the organization of a fire department. We remark, for the especial information of our readers, that there is nothing said about the suppression of the spirituous liquor traffic, in favor of which the voters, a year ago, by a two-third vote at the polls, declared themselves.

The committee, in a separate bill, have reported favorably on the memorial of the members of the auxiliary guard, fixing their annual compensation at six hundred dollars.

Solomon's Water Project.—The House committee for the District of Columbia, have reported against the memorial of C. F. Solomon, asking Congress to charter a company, with a capital of one million of dollars, for the purpose of supplying this city with water. They deem such legislation expedient, in view of the commencement of works by the general government for furnishing a greater quantity of the liquid from the Great Falls of the Potomac.

Infanticide.—On Friday night the scavenger of the Seventh ward found the corpse of a newborn female infant in a private garden. Upwards of seventy pounds of stones had been thrown upon the body, and the head of the infant was dreadfully mangled. The jury supposed, from facts elicited at the inquest, that the child was murdered, and then concealed in the manner we have mentioned to hide from the world a mother's shame.

George Kunkel's Benefit.—They who love to laugh and to listen to good vocal and instrumental music, will not forget that Mr. Kunkel, the head of the Nightingale Opera Troupe, takes a benefit to-night at the National Theatre. We predict an overflowing house, both on account of the professional and private worth of the benefactor, and the rich programme presented.

Accident.—On Friday morning Mr. George P. Noble, employed at the Washington navy yard, while banding the smoke-stack of a gun, a distance of about twenty feet, fell from a derrick, and was killed. He was a native of New York, and was a member of the navy. He was a very good man, and was much respected by his friends.

Congratulations.—The past week has been marked with excessive rejoicing by the successful candidates in the recent election and their friends. While the former have literally dispensed their hospitality, the latter have, in some instances, reciprocated by serenading the victors.

A Boy Shot.—On Thursday, a small boy, named Starbuck, whose father resides in Washington, was accidentally shot by his juvenile companion, near Cazanovia, about two miles from the city. The ball, from a pistol, entered his right side; but we are glad to learn that the wound is not likely to prove fatal.

Another Fire.—Near twelve o'clock, on Friday night, three or four small frame houses on H street, in the northern part of the city, were destroyed by fire.

HADLEY & FIELD'S AMERICAN WRITING FLUID.—It is generally understood, except among stationers and others, whose avocations have especially led to an appreciation of the value of a perfectly fluid ink, that the secret of the process of producing such a fluid has not, until recently, been discovered in this country. To produce an ink which should be a perfect chemical combination has been a problem, the solution of which has long exercised in vain the skill of American manufacturers of this indispensable article. The only ink in market having any claim to the possession of this characteristic is now, until the introduction of that to which we now refer, has been imported. Hadley & Field's ink is the result of practical and elaborate experiment, by one of our most accomplished and scientific chemists, and is claimed to be fully equal to any imported ink. Every test of its quality is freely invited, and the fullest testimony is given by those who have used it that it is in every respect equal to the English ink (Arnold & Stephens') which have hitherto commanded an extensive sale in the American market at high prices. It is already widely used, and its excellence attested by many of our principal banks, insurance companies, and merchants; and, from our own knowledge of its value, we advise those who appreciate the luxury of using a really good ink to give Hadley & Field's a trial.

The War in the East.
There is but little to add to the telegraphic report that Austria and Prussia had declared war against Russia, and will demand the evacuation of the territory of Turkey. The report requires authentication.

"A private letter from Berlin states that it was on the receipt of an angry letter from the Emperor of Russia, in reply to a recommendation of moderation, that the King of Prussia ordered the last protocol to be signed. It is further stated, that dispatches have been received from the French minister at Vienna, announcing that the explanations given by the Austrian cabinet relative to the treaty concluded between it and Prussia were highly satisfactory, and that those given by Prussia were, though not unsatisfactory, less unsatisfactory."

"VIENNA, May 25.—It is credibly related that Austria and Prussia yesterday sent a summons to Russia to evacuate the Turkish territory."

The text of the treaty of alliance between Austria and Prussia has been published. The contracting parties reciprocally guarantee to each other the possession of their German and non-German territories, so that any attack made upon the territory of the one, no matter whence it may come, shall be regarded as a hostile attack on the territory of the other."

"An additional article to this treaty has also been published, and if it is authentic, as we have no reason to doubt, it sets at rest all doubts as to the course of Austria and Prussia. The object of the additional article which appears to have been added, is to secure, in the more explicit understanding as to the initiative of the eventuality whereon the action of one high contracting party for the common defence of the territory of the other shall be grounded."

The preamble to this article says: "Their majesties have not been able to overlook the consideration that, in the event of the occupation of his highness the sultan's territory on the lower Danube by Russian troops, will endanger the political, moral, and material interests of the whole European continent, as well as of their own States, and this in so much higher degree the further Russia extends her war operations over Turkish territory. The august courts of Austria and Prussia, in order to avoid, if possible, all participation in the war that has broken out between Russia on the one side and England, France, and Turkey on the other, have decided to aid in the re-establishment of general peace. They specially consider the explanations recently given by the court of St. Petersburg, in which the Russian government has declared its intention to occupy the principalities as set aside by the concessions now made to, and in many respects carried out in favor of, the Turkish empire, as a powerful element of pacification, which they could only deeply deplore were they to see it deprived of further practical influence. They, therefore, hope that the expected replies of the St. Petersburg cabinet to the Prussian propositions, transmitted to it under date of the 5th instant, will offer the required security for the speedy withdrawal of the Russian troops from the Turkish territory."

In the event that these hopes should be disappointed, the following stipulations will be enforced: "The imperial Austrian legion will, on its part, address to the imperial Russian court propositions (proposals) having for their object to put an end to the occupation of the principalities, and to the requisites orders for the suspension of all further advance of its army into the Turkish territory, as well as to the evacuation of the principalities, and to the speedy evacuation of the Danubian principalities. The Prussian government will, with reference to its representations already transmitted to the court of St. Petersburg, again energetically support these propositions."

"Should the replies of the imperial Russian court, contrary to all hope, be of such kind that the object of the above propositions cannot be attained, the contracting parties, in order to obtain the same, adopt measures, under the stipulations of the present article, to the effect that they will conclude this day, to the effect that every hostile attack upon the territory of one or both high contracting parties shall be repelled by the other by all the military forces at their disposal."

"An offensive action on the part of both parties, however, be first occasioned by the incorporation of the principalities, or through an attack or passage of the Balkan, on the part of Russia, the contracting parties shall be submitted to the ratifications of the august sovereigns simultaneously with the treaty of peace mentioned."

Done at Berlin, April 30, 1854.

From the Baltic it is reported that the castle of Gustavshaven, south of Hango, and at the entrance of the Gulf of Finland, has been destroyed, and that 1,500 Russians have been taken prisoners. The fort of Gustavshaven is situated in the island of Hango, near the port of Stockholm. The island, on which there is a lighthouse, has a very deep port, sheltered by the rocks and the high lands of the cape. Cape Hango is a very important military position, commanding the entrance to the Gulf of Finland, and the pass leading to the Archipelago of Abo. The London News says:

"The object of Sir Charles Napier's expedition to the Baltic was to destroy the fortress right and left as they sail up the gulf, to demolish the Russian gun-boats which have been crammed in the narrow channel, and to thus step by step concentrate the force of the combined fleet on the destruction of the fortifications of Cronstadt."

No important operations were expected in the Baltic until the arrival of the French fleet, which was proceeding very leisurely to join Sir Charles Napier. This fleet was off Kiel on the 20th, and, according to some accounts, would remain in that harbor for several days. It numbers eight ships of the line, four frigates, and four steamers, and it was understood at first that it would be anchored in the Sound, and that the Russian fleet would be the object of dispatching a land force to the Baltic, immediately, had been discussed in the cabinet.

"The Eurydice, with two smaller men-of-war, and a French steamer, have sailed as a small squadron under Captain Lapierre, to visit the island of Heligoland, and to receive a visit from the Russian fleet. The White Sea is not navigable until June, they will be in plenty of time. They will be able to commit frightful devastation among the ports of the Baltic, and to the taking of Revel and Memel, and the Aland Islands required confirmation."

"S. PETERSBURG, May 9.—The Augsburg Gazette states that the Russian fleet is ready to sail from Cronstadt, and nearly 10,000 men garrison the forts. On the island lying west of the fortress tents are pitched, where troops find shelter, and all the coast is swarmed with soldiers, most of the Russian army are working at Paul's Fort."
